WELCOME TO METRO BOSTON

KRISTIN TOUSSAINT, REPORTER

When President Donald Trump announced that he was withdrawing the United States from the Paris climate agreement, Mayor Marty Walsh promised residents it would not affect Boston's own environmental efforts. Now, Boston is taking things a step further with plans to host an international climate summit. I talked with the city's chief of Environment, Energy and Open Space about why that effort is important.

MAJOR EARTHQUAKE HITS NEAR MEXICO CITY

1 A major earthquake of magnitude 7.1 struck central Mexico on Tuesday, killing at least 116 people and trapping more in buildings that had collapsed or caught fire, officials said. A civil protection official said at least two deaths occurred in the state of Puebla near Mexico City. Media reported at least five deaths in the state, but that figure could not immediately be confirmed. The governor of the State of Mexico, Alfredo Del Mazo, reported two more deaths. "People are really scared right now," said dentist Claudia Meneses who was in her clinic in Mexico City's Lindavista neighborhood when the earthquake struck mid-afternoon. "We're going to go to a building that fell to see if we can help." Earthquakes of magnitude 7 or above are regarded as major and are capable of causing widespread heavy damage.

MCCONNELL: OBAMACARE REPEAL MUST MOVE FAST

2 The U.S. Senate's top Republican on Tuesday urged quick action on a bill to repeal Obamacare but stopped short of promising to bring it to the Senate floor for a vote, as the clock ticks down on the latest attempt to kill the 2010 healthcare law. Mitch McConnell, the Senate's Republican leader, called the legislation drafted by senators Lindsey Graham and Bill Cassidy "an intriguing idea and one that has a great deal of support." Lawmakers should act because "our opportunity to do so may well pass us by if we don't act soon," McConnell said on the Senate floor. The bill has revived a fight that many in Washington thought was over when an Obamacare repeal-and-replace bill flopped in the Senate in July, humiliating McConnell and President Donald Trump.

HIGH TIDE

5 THINGS YOU NEED TO KNOW

O'REILLY: FIRING POLITICAL AND FINANCIAL HIT JOB

4 Popular former Fox News host Bill O'Reilly, who was fired over allegations of sexual harassment, said on Tuesday he was the victim of a "political and financial hit job" and that he had never mistreated anyone in his 42-year career. In his first TV interview since being fired in April, O'Reilly, whose pugnacious "The O'Reilly Factor" was the most-watched cable news show, said he was brought down by sponsor boycotts and wider business decisions at Twenty-First Century Fox Inc. "This was hit job, a political and financial hit job," O'Reilly said in the interview on NBC's "Today" show. "There were a lot of other business things in play at that time and still today that 21st Century was involved with," he added. A Fox representative did not immediately return calls for comment.

TRUMP USING CAMPAIGN FUNDS TO PAY LEGAL BILLS

5 President Donald Trump is using money donated to his re-election campaign and the Republican National Committee to pay for his lawyers in the probe of alleged Russian interference in the U.S. election, according to two people familiar with the matter. The U.S. Federal Election Commission allows the use of private campaign funds to pay legal bills arising from being a candidate or elected official. While previous presidential campaigns have used these funds to pay for routine legal matters such as ballot access disputes and compliance requirements, Trump would be the first president in the modern campaign finance era to use such funds to cover the costs of responding to a criminal probe. One person familiar with the matter said the first payments has already been made and would be disclosed in public filings.

Boston will host climate summit to help cities uphold Paris agreement

The summit will help cities around the world in their efforts to reduce emissions, officials say.

KRISTIN TOUSSAINT
@kristindakota
kristin.toussaint@metro.us

Boston will host an international climate summit next summer to discuss with cities across the world how to uphold the principles of the Paris climate agreement, even though President Trump has withdrawn the United States from the environmental effort.

The decision to hold such a summit comes after the plan for Boston to host the third annual U.S.-China Climate Leaders Summit unraveled. That decision was made under the Obama administration, but the change in administrations disrupted the planning efforts.

"We got indication from [the Trump administration] that that summit wasn't going to be a priority for the administration at that time," said Austin Blackmon, Boston's chief of Environment, Energy and Open Space.

"So we internally deliberated," he continued, "and said that upholding the tenets of the Paris agreement are too important for us not to have an international convening to help other cities accelerate their progress toward reducing emissions."

Boston will be inviting mayors and teams from Chinese cities as well as other countries for the event, set to be in the summer of 2018. Logistic details like the specific date, duration and location of the event have not yet been pinned down, Blackmon said, but Mayor Marty Walsh was eager to get the news out.

Walsh is a member of the C40 Cities Climate Leadership Group, a network of cities committed to addressing climate change, and will tap that group in the planning process.

Boston has made its own climate change efforts, but the importance of an international summit, Blackmon said, is to explore how cities across the globe can work together to reach big goals.

"When you look globally, 54 percent of the world's population lives in cities and over two-thirds of energy use as well as emissions come from those urban areas, so if you're thinking of a good place to start, cities are an excellent location," he said.

Cities are also where most actions are implemented because they have funding and power to influence change.

"That's why Mayor Walsh made very clear that the work we do in Boston is important," Blackmon said, "but it's important for us to also work with international cities, to learn from their best practices, give our best practices, learn from their mistakes and share ours as well.

"We recognize that upholding the tenets of the Paris agreement is something that's important not just to residents of Boston, of Massachusetts, of the United States, but globally," he added.

"... upholding the tenets of the Paris agreement are too important for us not to have an international convening ..."

If threatened, US will 'totally destroy' North Korea, Trump tells UN

Trump later also tweeted the line from his speech vowing to destroy North Korea.

Donald Trump escalated his standoff with North Korea over its nuclear challenge on Tuesday, threatening to "totally destroy" the country of 26 million people and mocking its leader, Kim Jong Un, as a "rocket man."

In a hard-edged speech to the United Nations General Assembly, Trump offered a grim portrait of a world in peril, adopted a confrontational approach to solving challenges from Iran to Venezuela, and gave an unabashed defense of U.S. sovereignty.

"The United States has great strength and patience, but if it is forced to defend itself or its allies, we will have no choice but to totally destroy North Korea," Trump told the 193-member world body, sticking closely to a script.

President Trump gave a hard-edged speech at the U.N.

As loud, startled murmurs filled the hall, Trump described Kim in an acid tone, saying, "Rocket man is on a suicide mission for himself and his regime."

His remarks rattled world leaders gathered in the green-marbled U.N. General Assembly hall, where minutes earlier U.N. Secretary-General Antonio Guterres appealed for statesmanship, saying: "We must not sleepwalk our way into war."

Trump's most direct military threat to attack North Korea was his latest expression of concern about Pyongyang's repeated launching of ballistic missiles over Japan.

His advisers say he is concerned about North Korea's advances in missile technology and the few means available for a peaceful response without China's help.

UN chief says statesmanship is needed, takes digs at Trump

United Nations Secretary-General Antonio Guterres appealed on Tuesday for statesmanship to avoid war with North Korea and criticized world leaders who stoke resentment over refugees for political gain, taking digs at President Donald Trump.

In his first address to the annual 193-member U.N. General Assembly since taking office in January, Guterres said the crisis over North Korea's nuclear missile program must be solved through a political process.

Trump has warned North Korea that military action was an option for the United States as Pyongyang has carried out a series of tests toward developing the ability to target the United States with a nuclear-tipped missile.

The U.N. Security Council has unanimously imposed nine rounds of sanctions on North Korea since 2006 and Guterres appealed for the 15-member body to maintain its unity on North Korea.

Guterres, a former head of the U.N. refugee agency, also spoke of being "pained to see the way refugees and migrants have been stereotyped and scapegoated – and to see political figures stoke resentment in search of electoral gain." REUTERS

DEMOCRATIC REACTION

Democratic Senate leader calls Trump's 'Rocket Man' remark at UN 'risky'

Senate Democratic leader Chuck Schumer said on Tuesday that President Donald Trump's characterization of North Korean leader Kim Jong Un as "Rocket Man" during a speech to the United Nations was "risky."

"If I were giving the president advice, I would have said avoid using 'Rocket Man,'" Schumer said during a press conference at the U.S. Capitol. "We know the leader of North Korea is erratic, to put it kindly. That kind of language I think is risky." REUTERS

Blac Chyna's rap dreams

Blac Chyna is still trying to make Blac Chyna happen. That's right. Chyna is still going for that whole rap thing.

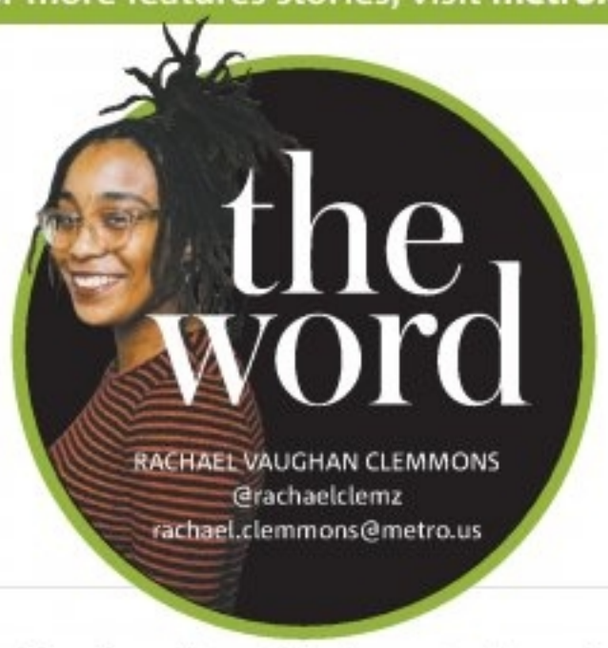
An insider confirms that she's met with various labels, is collaborating with "very big" artists and will be announcing some "big news" soon.

Only problem is, she's not very good. "Yes, she is trying to rap and no, [it's] horrible," a music source told Page Six. "All the majors are listening, and, sadly, she will likely get a deal. If she lands it, somebody will be stupid enough to give her a seven-figure advance."

It makes sense. Chyna has a lot more free time now that she and Rob Kardashian have settled on a custody agreement. And I'm sure $20,000 worth of Kardashian coins — the amount Rob is paying in child support — doesn't hurt, either.

Girl, I am not mad at you. But I am going to kindly pass on this one. Good luck, bb!

She's very serious about this new venture.



Jada isn't a Scientologist, exactly

Jada Pinkett Smith would like you to know that dabble as she may, she is not a Scientologist.

She could try to be more convincing, maybe?

Via Twitter, the "Girls Trip" actress denied being part of the controversial church — even though last week, former Scientologist Leah Remini insisted that Pinkett Smith was. "I know Jada's in. She's been in Scientology a long time," Remini told the Daily Beast.

Pinkett Smith, 46, on the other hand, insists that she simply appreciates the merits of the cult, I mean religion.

"I have studied Dianetics, and appreciate the merits of Study Tech… but I am not a Scientologist. I practice human kindness." Mmkay!

Not exactly surprising.

Scott Disick has inappropriate taste

Scott Disick is reportedly dating 19-year-old Sofia Richie — sister to Nicole Richie — because the world is ending, I guess.

The 34-year-old has reportedly made things official with Richie the Younger. And what does official look like between a young woman who was only recently considered an adult in the state of California and a dude in his mid-30s who is most famous for being a sidekick on "Keeping Up With the Kardashians?" Grabbing coffee and shopping at Barneys, of course!

And, no, you're not the only one with some concerns. "It's so weird," a source tells the magazine. "Sofia had been a family friend for years, and was close to Kendall and Kylie."

Disick most recently was linked with Bella Thorne — another 19-year-old. Boy, oh, boy, does he have a type these days! — who may or may not be an animate cannabis leaf with an affinity for Manic Panic. Which is a compliment!

Newton teacher plans to bring home the bacon on 'MasterChef'

Will Jason Wang come up big on tonight's season finale?

MATT JUUL
@MetroBOS
letters@metro.us

Jason Wang hopes to make Boston proud when he throws down on tonight's "MasterChef" finale.

The music teacher at Newton South High School seriously impressed the judges this season and now hopes to bring home the $250,000 grand prize on Wednesday's season finale. While Wang knows he has chops in the kitchen, he was surprised to make it so far in the reality series competition.

"I am wicked excited to have made it to the finale," Wang says. "I'm so thrilled to represent New England, Massachusetts, Boston and Newton, so I'm over the moon."

Can Jason Wang win over Gordon Ramsay tonight? FOX

Ahead of the finale, we caught up with the educator-turned-culinary star to get his thoughts on Boston's food scene, Gordon Ramsay and his future after "MasterChef."

Have your New England roots influenced the way you cook?

good stuff. Being from New England, I like blueberries and cranberries and, in the fall, foraging for mushrooms. New England has awesome apples. It's one of my favorite foods. Growing up with all the local products around here, that's definitely inspired the way I think about flavorings and pairings and how to put them together on the plate.

Do you get a chance to check out Boston's food scene a lot?
I'm actually very frugal. I would rather go buy $50 worth of food than go out to a restaurant. But the Boston food scene is amazing. I'm a big Chinatown person because you get lots of different foods for amazing prices and the quality is excellent. I go to Hei La Moon, which is awesome for dim sum. Also, Island Creek Oyster Bar and Eastern Standard.

MICHAEL BECKER / FOX

How intimidating was Gordon Ramsay on the show?
He's actually a very imposing dude. He's kind of a big dude. Then he's barking at you and, I don't know, I think I exited my body a few times because it was so surreal. The way he approaches all the contestants, he's there to get the best out of you. He may do that in a very aggressive way sometimes, but it's not to put you down. He's trying to strip away all the crap and get to the heart of it and make you do your best.

What's the best cooking advice you received from him?
We are used to being at home cooking for family and friends, but in a large setting with a large number of people, you have to coordinate, so you have to learn how to delegate. That's one of the biggest tips. As a musician, I'm a perfectionist, and as a conductor, I'm a bit of a control freak. Being able to let go and trust people to execute is definitely one of the skills he taught me when I was on the show.

What are your culinary plans for after the finale?
At the heart of it, I'm an educator. Whether it's music or food, I find so much satisfaction in teaching other people about new techniques, ingredients and ways to put things together. I'm doing some cooking classes through the Cambridge Center for Adult Education. I've been teaching there occasionally for a couple years. I really want to come up with some content and events where I can interact with fans and people curious about food.

How to survive a trip to Ikea

Three longtime Ikea employees give their best tips on how to survive a shopping trip and emerge victorious.

EVA KIS
eva.kis@metro.us

We love Ikea's clean Swedish lines, clever storage ideas and affordable prices — but walking into the store can still be overwhelming.

Even Rocky Brewer, who's been with the furniture giant for about 10 years, acknowledges that the experience of first walking in and seeing the size and selection of the store "is definitely a challenge for a lot of people."

Many a relationship has been tested on an Ektorp sofa or over a Hemnes coffee table. Choosing is already hard, but when there are so many choices and so many ways in which your boyfriend's furniture aesthetic really should've evolved beyond black by now.

This is where having a solid game plan and knowing how to navigate the store can make all the difference. And a few people will get even luckier when the Ikea Home Tour Squad knocks on their door to transform a space in their home with expert advice.

For their fourth cross-country tour, the squad will be coming to four cities: Philadelphia, New York/New Jersey, Washington, D.C. and Boston (not until Feb. 26), and you can submit a short video about a dream you have and how a little interior design magic can help make it come true.

Because the Home Tour Squad all come with years of experience on the Ikea sales floor, we got them to share their secrets to not feeling overwhelmed by the big blue box and making the most of your next Ikea shopping trip.

Come with an open mind

Arrive knowing what you need, but with an open mind on how to achieve it.

"The best mind-set is openness and to let yourself inspired," says Stephanie Recupero, who's been with Ikea for over seven years. "The room settings that we have are a unique way to present how a home can be set up and how you can function in the space with that furniture."

Take advantage of the in-store experts

When you're not at your shopping best, Brewer suggests relying on those who are: "The overall tip I would give to people is to be willing to seek help when you need it," he says. "There are co-workers all over the store who are knowledgeable and professional in their areas. They can help people break down the needs of their space and help find the best solution."

Let your ideas digest

We learn early on to never shop hungry — but saving your meal at Ikea's restaurant for the middle of your trip rather than the start can be helpful. "Sit down and enjoy your meal while going over your plans and get inspired through the catalog," suggests Jesse Myatt, the squad's cameraman and seven-year Ikea veteran. "It's a cool place to hang out and evaluate the rest of your shopping experience."

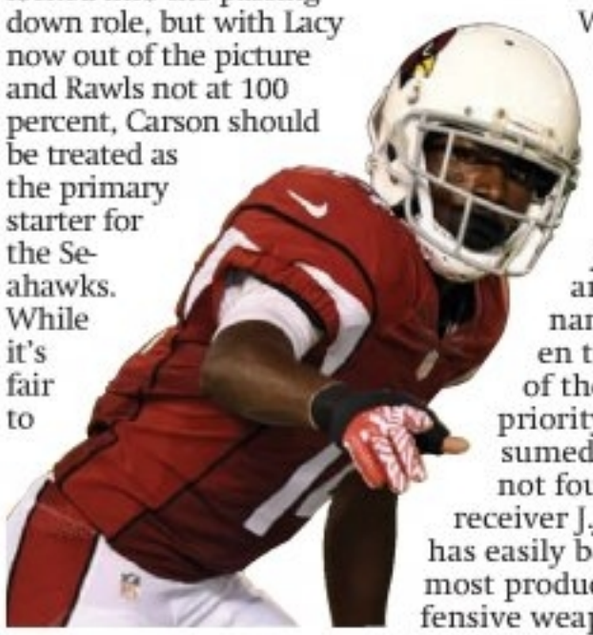
Coming into the season, it looked like Seahawks fans would be treated to some combination of Thomas Rawls, Eddie Lacy and C.J. Prosise.

After their Week 2 win over San Francisco, it looks as though there is a fourth name to add to the mix. With Thomas Rawls still recovering from an ankle injury and Eddie Lacy a healthy scratch (he's now all but forgotten in fantasy), it was 24-year-old Chris Carson who led the backfield with 20 carries for 93 yards. C.J. Prosise seems locked into the passing-down role, but with Lacy now out of the picture and Rawls not at 100 percent, Carson should be treated as the primary starter for the Seahawks. While it's fair to speculate on whether or not the Seattle offensive line will provide any room to run for any back, it's the role and the usage that matters here.

Chris Carson should be treated as the primary starter in Seattle. GETTY IMAGES

A nod to Nelson



With the Cardinals offense reeling after the loss of David Johnson, an unlikely name has risen to the top of the fantasy priority list. Assumed third (if not fourth) wide receiver J.J. Nelson has easily been the most productive offensive weapon for the Cardinals through two weeks, tallying 10 catches for 163 yards and two touchdowns. Veteran Larry Fitzgerald is still the number one option on the depth chart, but he lacks the speed and field-stretching abilities that Nelson brings to the table. With John Brown still dealing with injuries in addition to a sickle cell trait that is an ever-looming concern, Nelson is going to have a firm role in an offense that is going to be entirely dependent on the pass with it's best runner on the shelf for most of the season.

Howard doomed?

Jordan Howard was drafted as a late-Round-1, early-Round-2 feature back, and to this point he has been the ultimate draft bust. With rookie Tarik Cohen coming on as the pass-catching option and some sort of arm injury holding him back, Jordan Howard has gone form RB1 to desperate flex play in just two weeks. While I don't see him being phased out of the offense given how successful he was last year, it's incredibly tough to start Howard currently. He should be able to regain some of his former glory should Cohen go down with an injury or if his production fades, but for the time being you can't ignore Howard's loss of role and completely ineffectiveness through two games. It's not quite time to consider dropping or trading him, but it is time to seriously consider whether or not you have a better running back option that you can start this week.

Pickups of the week

Ed Dickson, TE, Panthers - With Greg Olsen out with a broken foot for the foreseeable future, backup tight end Ed Dickson will see the majority of snaps at tight end for the Panthers. He has a tasty matchup against the Saints in Week 3.

Trevor Siemian, QB, Broncos - Siemian has proven himself to be a capable backup QB for fantasy purposes with six touchdowns through the first two weeks. He gets the Bills in Week 3, and the Broncos will likely have to throw to move the ball.

Jermaine Kearse, WR, Jets - Kearse is separating himself as the only fantasy viable pass-catcher on the Jets roster, and with 11 catches and two touchdowns through the first two weeks, he should carry flex value going forward.

Did Brady and Ivanka Trump once date one another?

Ivanka Trump and Tom Brady may have had a sex fling and dated back in the day.

Former White House communications director Anthony Scaramucci hinted with TMZ that the two may have been an item once upon a time and that the reason Brady did not attend the April White House ceremony to honor the Super Bowl champion Patriots is that Brady and Ivanka Trump may have had a relationship at some point.

"Somebody should ask Gisele [Bundchen] why Tom Brady didn't show up at the championship party [at the White House in April]," Scaramucci said. "I don't 100 percent know but my guess is that there could be a little jealously and protection there from Gisele over Tom Brady and she probably didn't want him to go … I don't know. … Maybe there was a relationship between him and Ivanka at some point. I don't know the real reason."

Brady not showing up at the White House clearly miffed President Donald Trump as Trump did not mention Brady by name in his address to the team. Trump, who led many to believe he and Brady were tight during the 2016 Presidential Election, has not spoken about Brady since. Scaramucci, however, said he believes the two are still tight.

"I think [Tom] and [Donald Trump's] relationship is very strong," he said.

Brady told "Extra" during the summer that he missed the April White House visit to spend time with his mother, who has battled health issues over the past year. Brady also missed the Patriots' trip to the White House in 2015 when Barack Obama was still in office.

Brady and Gisele Bundchen began dating in 2007, and prior to that Brady was in a relationship with actress Bridget Moynahan. Ivanka Trump and Jared Kushner, now married, also began dating in 2007. MATT BURKE

Pats' D must continue to improve

Lightning-quick Deshaun Watson and the Texans are up next.

After Week 1's performance against the Chiefs, many were left wondering which part of the ball to be more concerned about — the offense or defense?

The Pats scored 30 points by halftime in New Orleans in Week 2, just the 11th time in team history they've done that.

So, once again, the demise of the 40-year-old Brady appears to have been greatly exaggerated. Most of us probably could have guessed it would turn out that way. But what about the defense?

In Week 1, the defense allowed rookie Kareem Hunt to rush for 148 yards and a touchdown. They allowed receiver Tyreek Hill to catch seven balls for 133 yards. Both players had a catch play of 70-plus yards, and Hunt had a 58-yard run too. Uncharacteristic of a Belichick-coached defense.

But just as the offense showed improvement from the next week, so did the defense.

With New Orleans marching on their first drive of the game, the Patriots defensive line stuffed both Mark Ingram and Adrian Peterson on back-to-back rush attempts, eventually forcing the Saints to settle for a field goal. Late in the second quarter, the Patriots stopped the Saints on fourth down, and were able to turn it into three points of their own, making it a 30-13 game at halftime.

Yes, the defense gave up 356 yards through the air, but against Drew Brees and the Saints, it's limiting the yards after catch that's important. The Patriots were more successful this time.

While eight defensive players combined to miss 12 tackles for the Patriots defense in Week 1 against Kansas City, the New England defense missed just one tackle against New Orleans in Week 2, according to Pro Football Focus. That would seem to fall more in line with the defense's success in limiting "big plays" last season, as they allowed just 59 plays of 25-plus yards through the ground or air, second-least in the NFL, according to SportingCharts.com.

The Patriots defense has a much more favorable matchup this coming Sunday in Foxboro against the Houston Texans and rookie quarterback DeShaun Watson. Though Watson earned a win in his first career start, he finished just 15-for-24 for 125 yards, his longest completed pass for 25. Watson can hurt the Patriots on the ground, however, as he rushed for 67 yards including a 49-yard touchdown run in which he escaped pressure in the pocket and avoided at least three tackles on his way to the end zone.

Aries Emotions will surface when dealing with partnership issues. Stay calm, since getting all worked up won't make matters better. Listen to complaints and adjust.

Taurus Interaction should be your intent. Sharing your thoughts and ideas with like-minded people will encourage you to talk about your ideas, but also implement them.

Gemini Your dual personality will cause uncertainty and make you appear inconsistent when it comes time to make a decision. Listen to whatever advice is offered.

Cancer Make a physical change that will lift your spirits and give you greater incentive to get out and enjoy life. A proposal should be seriously considered.

Leo An opportunity to do something you enjoy and earn a living is within reach. Refuse to let someone stifle your plans with negativity.

Virgo Self-awareness, preparation and development will help you move closer to your goal. A unique approach will cause others to take note of you.

Libra Emotional matters will leave you feeling exhausted. Don't start something you cannot finish. Look for refuge with someone you view as reliable and trustworthy.

Scorpio Ask and you shall receive. What you have to offer is more valued than you realize. Stand tall and be proud of your actions and creations. Romance is highlighted.

Sagittarius Before you move on to more enjoyable tasks, be sure to take care of your responsibilities. Being dependable will help you avoid complaints.

Capricorn Tidy up loose ends. Avoid anyone pushing a risky venture. Go it alone if you want to control how your money is spent. Joint ventures look dicey.

Aquarius A money deal will bring you good returns. Invest more time in yourself and your talents. Greater interest will be shown if you market what you have to offer.

Pisces Put your best foot forward and share your thoughts. You'll encounter someone who is on the same page as you and has something special to offer. EUGENIA LAST
